

Abstract of the Disclosure

A cellular radio telecommunications network is disclosed in which the new base station responds to information from the radio network controller to send downlink data to the mobile station only after it has received an uplink frame therefrom. This provides faster radio link set up, less interference and a smoother switch on of communications with the new Node B.

5

TOP SECRET